

Diego

Diego (previously known as Draco) is a one year old sweet and goofy Boxer/lab mx we think. He's a joyful exuberant guy that is friendly with all people, young and old and greets visitors with great enthusiasm. He is a very energetic guy, is sweet and affectionate and wants to please. He knows some basic commands--he will "sit" and "stay" but not long yet. Diego is responding well to leash training...he is doing very well. He's highly food motivated, so treat rewards really help shape his behavior.

One challenge Diego has is his separation anxiety...for the time being, if his foster mom needs to go somewhere without him, she drops him off at the doggy daycare or has another person come to keep him company.

This wonderful guy needs a home with a decent sized fenced yard (not invisible/electric fence), a person or family that is home more than not and one that can provide alternative human company while they work on overcoming his separation anxiety...like doggy daycare or a pet sitter. He will also do best living with a compatible doggy companion that can match his energy. (He is not crate trained...he is absolutely terrified of even approaching a crate.)
