

Draco

Draco is a one year old sweet and goofy Boxer/shepherd mix guy—with maybe some lab in the mix. He's a joyful exuberant guy that is friendly with all people, young and old and greets visitors with overwhelming enthusiasm. He is a very energetic guy. He is sweet and affectionate and wants to please. He knows some basic commands and will momentarily sit, stay. He's had little leash experience so leash training needs to be high on an adopter's todo list for Draco. He's highly food motivated, so treat rewards really help shape his behavior.

Draco has separation anxiety...we are starting to work on that, but for the time being, if his foster mom needs to go somewhere without him, she drops him off at the doggy daycare or has another person come to keep him company. Draco needs a home with a human or humans who have the time and patience to work to help him with his separation issues...it might be that another dog in the home would help.

Draco is not crate trained...he is absolutely terrified of even approaching a crate. This guy needs a decent sized fenced yard (not invisible/electric fence), a person or family that does not need to leave him at home alone long hours and when they are not at home, can provide alternative human company while he overcomes his separation anxiety...like doggy daycare. And he will do best living with a compatible doggy companion that can match his energy.
