Become A Foster

Why Foster?

Foster care is the most crucial ingredient in dog rescue. Without available foster homes, many dogs will not be rescued. Becoming a foster is a fulfilling commitment yet extremely satisfying knowing that you've helped a dog get a second chance at life.

Responsibilities

A foster companion or family must provide a safe, secure environment AND the love needed to nurture those dogs back to their happy, healthy selves. Being a foster care provider takes time, dedication and genuine caring and showcase your dog at our bi-monthly adoptions events.

Relationship with Potential Adopters

Because you will have the best knowledge of your foster dog's temperament, likes and dislikes, we will ask you to share that information with people who are considering adopting the dog. CHEW will help find and screen potential adopters.

Costs

CHEW Dog Rescue will pay all necessary veterinary fees such as health assessment exams, spay or neuter, microchipping, vaccinations, medication and help with special dietary needs when called for.

Basic Foster Care Duties

- As a foster “parent”, you will not only provide shelter, food and healthcare (when needed), you will also be responsible for learning about the dog's temperament, character and abilities - information that is essential to finding the right home for the dog.
- You may need to refine the dog's house manners, such as basic commands, and obedience such as sit, come, stay and leash walking. Some dogs may not be totally potty trained and may need some assistance in that area.
- It is also important to socialize with other dogs, people and surroundings. These things will depend on a wide range of factors: the dog's age, his history, how much time you devote each day, etc.
- If you find that you need help with your foster dog, contact CHEW and let us know. CHEW can provide advice and when needed, professional training.
